

Do you have a training budget you never knew existed?

If you employ anyone who used to be in the forces, you could be sitting on a massive and FREE training budget you never knew you had.

Where does this money come from?

Forces leavers are given Enhanced Learning Credits which they can use to gain skills and qualifications to transition into civilian life.

This can sometimes be up to £6,000

per person

(3 claims of up to £2,000 each)

Only 8% of forces leavers make any claims

Ex-service personnel have up to # 10 years

to use their ELC allowance after leaving the forces

If you employ 100 ex-services personnel who have each made a claim of £2000, you could be sitting on a potential training budget of...

...that you never knew even existed!

The rules

- You must use an ELC-approved supplier (Quanta are 1201)
- They can only make one claim per financial year
- The training must be NQF level 3 or higher
- The training must relate to their current role or chosen career

APPROVED BY THE MOD
IN SUPPORT OF
THE ELC SCHEME

Under the scheme, the ex-service leaver (or employer) is expected to contribute 20% of the value of training with their ELC covering the other 80%.

Why don't people use more claims?

They think they'll be asked to use annual leave to take the training

Either they are reluctant to contribute 20% or think they will be turned down if they ask their employer to pay

Some just forget - they get caught up in the franticness of corporate life

We have signed up to the Corporate Covenant to ensure that ex-service military personnel have what they're entitled to as part of their service to our country.

As an approved supplier, we offer project management, IT service management and technical IT courses to ex-service personnel. Find out more at www.quanta.co.uk/elc

www.quanta.co.uk/elc 0800 018 3975 - kate.ross@quanta.co.uk amanda.taylor@quanta.co.uk

quanta

powered by

Piktochart
make information beautiful